When during sickness, affliction, or absence from home, a practitioner entrusts the care of his practice to a professional friend, the latter should not make any charge to the former, or to the patients for his services, hut should in all things be the locum, tenens of the absentee. If, however, the attendance be protracted, and the labour proportionate, a fitting acknowledgment should, if circumstances admit, be made. 4. When a practitioner attends for, or in consultation with another, and it appears necessary to change the treatment, it should be done with the most scrupulous care, so as not to injure the reputation or wound the feelings of the previous attendant. Cfo-necessary, meddlesome interference with the treatment should be carefully avoided as unjust to the family doctor, and derogatory to true science. 5. When a practitioner is consulted by a patient whom...
