In its arrangement it is strictly inductive and practical. To those who may have objections to the use of sacred words in the lessons for practice, it is proper to remark, that, while an inconsiderate use of sacred words is at all times to be avoided, they are adopted in the practical lessons of the present work after due deliberation; and, it is thought, for good reasons. The manual is designed primarily for Sunday-schools. The lessons are so constructed that children who have learned to sing by rote, may, by an ordinary singer, be taught in one hour to sing a hymn scientifically. Now, in learning the music, the poetry need not, and should not be sung, but the sounds should be uttered with the names of the notes, fa, sol, la, or do, re, mi, c. The hymns, therefore, need only be used for devotional purposes. The teacher is here reminded, that it is incumbent upon him at all times, whatever may be the character of the songs or hymns sung, to make the pupils understand fully the meaning of the words before they are suffered to sing them. In adopting this course it is believed that, not only Sunday-schools, but common schools, and singing-schools, may make a beneficial use of sacred words, even in their lessons. In the selection of hymns it was impossible to meet the wants...
